

Visiting Lecturer's Series- What is Ethical Leadership?

What is Ethical Leadership?

The ethics of leadership captures the interest of many who share the belief that the conduct of leaders does matter. Leaders occupy positions of privilege with accompanying power to influence organisational outcomes which affect the lives of employees and stakeholders. This lecture will explore the characteristics of ethical leadership and present the argument that the behaviour of leaders is an important component to business success.

Ms Julie Crews

B.A. UWA, B.Ed. Churchlands CAE. M.I.R. UWA
Edith Cowan University, Perth Western Australia

Background

Ms Julie Crews commenced her career in education and her experience has included urban, rural, interstate and overseas appointments. During her teaching career, she held various leadership roles including Deputy Principal, District Professional Development Manager and facilitator for the professional development of teachers. A career in the public sector followed as a senior labour relations and small business advisor in the State Government. Over the next several years, Ms Crews held various positions across both state and federal government agencies, including the Australian Consumer and Competition Commission, The Office of the Auditor General, The Department of the Premier and Cabinet, The Office of E-Government and The Office for Women's Policy. Ms Crews' area of passion is the development of leaders with integrity and she has recently submitted her doctorate in ethics and leadership. Before being appointed to ECU, Ms Crews has taught in Human Resource Management and Industrial Relations at the University of Western Australia, Management and Business Communication at Curtin University and has been a Regional Advisor for the Australian Public Service Commission. Her current role at ECU includes teaching Business Ethics and HRM in the MBA program. She has also held the role of course co-ordinator for the University's HRM courses.

Date: 13 October, Thursday

Time: 7.00pm – 8.30pm

Venue: CITY Campus @ 410 North Bridge Road, Room 06-03A

FREE ADMISSION. LIMITED SEATS.

Please call or write in for reservations by 3 October 2011.

RSVP: 6572 5617 or marketing@sma.edu.sg